Targeted topics

SU-DRS01-2018-2019-2020: Human factors, and social, societal, and organisational aspects for disaster-resilient societies

Competencies

- Organisation competencies Founded by the CNRS, the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales, the École Normale Supérieure, the École des Ponts-ParisTech, INRA, and the University Paris 1 Panthéon Sorbonne, the Paris School of Economics has an established international reputation as a world leading research institution in economics
- Organisation experience in the European project In 2018 H2020 coordinator 1 & partner 5; ERC 3
- The skills you can bring Our research team (myself, Mouez Fodha, Daniel Mirza, Thierry Verdier) has strong analytical skills and a wide international network, including European and US colleagues all working on the economics of terrorism. We have already coordinated Horizon projects in the past & were just awarded an ANR "Because Terror" .

Project idea

- We plan to work on resilient societies by examining the impact of terrorism on different actors in society (businesses, consumers, criminals, politicians, citizens, security forces & institutions) with an aim to assess the direct and indirect costs of terrorism and design counter policies
- List of the complementary skills you need for your consortium
- We have research partners in other European countries such as in Germany, Italy, the UK, and we would like to strengthen the synergies with security forces in France and across Europe
