Short profile of the Organisation: Club Young Scientists is a NGO founded in 2005 with the aim to support active social participation of young people, to promote and develop their research interests and creative thinking. CYS supports an ecosystem for building STEM competencies and provides young people with opportunities for professional and personal development. Club Young Talents' main ongoing project is the annual Science and Innovation Fair. During the Science and Innovation Fair two competitions with different target group are held - Innofair, a high school students science fair, affiliated with Intel ISEF, and YES - an annual students' and PhDs' contest encouraging entrepreneurship thinking, project competence and applied research and transfer of technologies. Before going independent, the Science and Innovation Fair was a part of the European Researchers' Night for six consecutive years, as a part of the Framework Programmes Project and has also been a part of various Erasmus+ and Youth in Action projects concerning student mobility in various EU countries and supporting non-formal education, the latest of which was the Entrepreneurship Lab held in Lithuania in February 2017.
