1) PROJECT INFORMATION

Field of expertise related to the topic: Research and innovation programmes for public administration; public employees training, with a significant focus on senior officials training; training and support for institutional change; public policies evaluation (in cooperation with Ivàlua, the Catalan Institute for Public Policies Evaluation)

Potential contribution to the project:

We are willing to participate, as a governmental partner, in EU projects engaged with participatory mission-oriented research and RRI. We can particularly contribute to these projects by connecting decision makers with all the different actors from the quadruple helix in order to get them enrolled with science, citizen science and the scientific community, for the promotion of activities enhancing open schooling.

We also have expertise in training senior officials in order to promote science-based policy making for any kind of public policies.

Role in the project:

Short profile of the Organisation:

The Public Administration School of Catalonia (EAPC) is an independent administrative body founded in 1912 and currently linked to the Ministry for Digital Policy and Public Administration of the Government of Catalonia. Our mission is to improve and innovate the Catalan public administrations through training and research on public management and public policies. We are a strategic agent in the training aimed at all Catalan administrations, with a significant focus on senior management training and post-graduate studies. Likewise, we have launched an innovative research programme with the aim of promoting useful research to policymakers for decision making in response to social challenges. The research we promote is clearly mission-oriented and follows the RRI principles. Firstly, we look for the commitment of decision makers to face their challenges by means of science-based and evidence-informed policies. At the same time, we aim to attract the scientific community to do research that provides the necessary evidence to inform these policies aimed at solving social challenges. Finally, we also aim to involve the other relevant stakeholders (quadruple helix) through participative processes. In sum, we are leading an experimental process with the aim of producing science more democratic in terms of participation, more legitimate in terms of resolving social needs and more effective in terms of results.
